The College of Charleston, founded in 1770 and chartered in 1785, is a comprehensive institution providing a high-quality public education in the arts and sciences, languages, education, and business. It functioned as an independent, non-denominational liberal arts college until 1837, when the City of Charleston began contributing to its upkeep, making it the first municipal college in the nation. In 1918, the College also began receiving support from the County of Charleston. The College returned to private status in 1949. Then during the 1970 session, the S.C. Legislature voted to add the College to the state's system of institutions of higher learning and it was officially transferred to state ownership, July 1, 1970. Effective July 1, 1992, under Act 272, the College established a new component for graduate programs and research grant studies, the University of Charleston, S.C. The College is a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, Commission on Colleges, the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, the American Association of University Women, American Council on Education, the Association of American Colleges and Universities, Council for Higher Education Accreditation, and the Society for College and University Planning. The College's accreditation was reaffirmed in 2017 by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Colleges. It is an equal opportunity institution.

Governor’s School for Agriculture at

John de la Howe School, S.C.

192 Gettys Rd., McCormick 29835

Tel. (864) 391-2131

Created by Sec. 59-49-10, the S.C. Governor’s School for Agriculture at John de la Howe (SCGSA) is located on 1,310 acres in rural McCormick County. The estate was willed by Dr. John de la Howe in 1797 to create an “agricultural seminary for twelve poor boys and twelve poor girls from Abbeville.” The School first opened in the early 1800s with the name Lethe Agricultural Seminary. In 1918 the School was renamed the John de la Howe Industrial School and became an agency of the State. In the mid 1980s, the mission of the School changed to serve children who struggled in a traditional school. In 2020, legislation was passed to create the new mission which closely aligns with Dr. de la Howe’s will. SCGSA is a state-funded, public, residential high school with grades 10–12 that is focused on providing a unique and challenging agricultural education program. The School is the first statewide program of its kind in the nation. SCGSA will allow students to receive hands-on training in the fields of agriculture, agribusiness, forestry, land management, food science, and more—all aimed at assessing the needs of modern farms. The mission is to provide quality agricultural education that will enable students to be the state’s future leaders in agribusiness, business, and education. SCHSA’s vision is to offer a rigorous agricultural education program that will challenge motivated high school students to develop their interest in agriculture and natural resources by providing classes and hands-on learning opportunities in agribusiness.

Chartered in 1983 by the State of South Carolina as a public, non-profit corporation, SCRA fuels South Carolina's Innovation economy by supporting entrepreneurs, enabling academic research and its commercialization, and connecting industry to innovators. SCRA remains self-sustaining through contributions to the Industry Partnership Fund (IPF), income generated from tenants in their Innovation Centers and other facilities, the proceeds from the sale of their government contracting affiliate, income generated by reserves, and returns generated from investments in early-stage technology companies. The IPF is an annual private contribution fund established by the South Carolina Legislature. The Fund offers dollar-for-dollar state tax credits to contributors as a way for the State to inject seed money into the growth of promising technology-based businesses and programs. As companies grow, they generate returns which are funneled back into the program to support new companies.
